Infant research and clinical implications

Contents

Introduction ......................................................... 95

Implicit knowledge in infant development and therapeutic context, Massimo Ammaniti ......................................................... 96

Integrating kleinian theory and intersubjective infant research observing projective identification, Stephen Seligman .......................... 110

The expanding world of Edward Tronick, Beatrice Beebe, Frank M. Lachmann ......................................................... 136

The role of the other: intersubjective psychic transmissions and pathological structures of the self, Giuseppe Moccia ......................................................... 148